Think-Pair-Share: Intertribal Song

In this lesson, students will be introduced to the celebration of life that are Pow Wows. To begin the lesson, play Intertribal Song by the Northern Inniniw Singers video. Tell students that today they will be starting an exploration about Pow Wows. Students will listen to the Intertribal song with an open heart and mind. After playing the song, ask students to think-pair-share. Prompt students to reflect on the following questions:

1. What kind of music did you hear?
2. What instruments did you hear?
3. Where do you think you would hear this type of music?

Give students 1-2 minutes to reflect upon the questions. Encourage students to write down their answers, feelings, thoughts if that helps them. After 1-2 minutes, students will turn to a partner and discuss the three questions. Give partner groups 1-2 minutes to discuss the questions. Prompt partner groups that they can share their new understandings to the rest of the class.

After students are finished sharing and reflecting, tell students that the video features a song from the Northern Inniniw Singers. The song that they listened to is an Intertribal Song. This is a song played at Pow Wows that are open to all Indigenous and non-Indigenous attendees to come dance with or without Regalia.

Next, prompt students that they will learn more about intertribal songs and Pow Wows through an introduction video.

Acquire: What strategies facilitate learning for groups and individuals?

Pow-Wow Introduction Video

Say:

“Today we will start our journey on learning about Pow Wows. A Pow Wow is a social gathering filled with songs and dances that Indigenous peoples have been doing for over one hundred years. We will be watching a video from Full Circle for Indigenous Education featuring Ray “Coco” Stevenson who will teach us more about Pow Wows!”

Prompt students to look, listen, and learn while watching the Pow Wow Introduction video. Play the video.

Pow Wow Vocabulary

After watching the Pow Wow video, instruct students that they will explore the question Ray “Coco” Stevenson presented “What will you see?”. Before students can explore and reflect on the question “What will you see” go over important Pow-Wow vocabulary.

On a large chart paper write out the following vocabulary words:

Regalia	Drums
Pow Wow	Tobacco
Sacred	Grand Entry
Intertribal	Feast

Read out the definitions and have students identify and match the terms. This activity can be used in any grade level from K-12. It is important to remember that all children and youth deserve to have fun and play in their learning.

Apply: How will students demonstrate their understanding?

What Will You See

Students will answer the question “What will you see?” at a Pow Wow. Students will reflect on the four topics that Ray “Coco” Stevenson presented - Regalia, Singers, Drums, and Grand Entry.

Students will answer the question “what do you see” from the Pow Wow Introduction video by identifying and labelling pictures of singers, Drums, Regalia, and grand entry to their names.

Hand out the “What Will You See” handout to students. Instruct students to draw and label a picture for each of the vocabulary terms. Encourage students to use lots of detail and colour in their drawings.

Assessment:

Trail Journal

While exploring, learning, and reflecting about Pow Wows students will summarize their understandings in their Trail Journals. The Trail Journal is a self-reflective journal or diary style writing and drawing text where students can confidently share their thoughts, reflections, conceptions, and develop their point of views.

Hand out a Trail Journal to each student. Advise them that this is a self-reflective journal where they can safely share their new understandings and wonders.

Instruct students that in their Trail Journal, for their first entry they will draw themselves dancing in an intertribal dance. Ask them to reflect and think back to the images they saw in the Pow Wow video. In an intertribal dance, anyone can dance with or without Regalia. Please stress that only Indigenous dancers would be wearing Regalia, and that the students can draw themselves wearing their everyday clothes. This activity is to get younger students excited about learning about Pow Wows as they relate the learning to their own identities, and how they interact with other people and communities.

Further Learning:

Pow Wow Vocabulary Activity Extension: Find the Definition Scavenger Hunt

Have students go online on the Full Circle Indigenous Education website at <https://fullcircleindigenous.ca> and look through the Pow Wow Trail Pamphlet to find the definition of the words. Alternatively, teachers could print out the Pow Wow Trail Pamphlet for students to explore.

Lesson Two: The Protocol

Title: The Protocol.

Theme: Protocol.

Grade Level: K-12.

Subject(s): English Language Arts, Social Studies.

Time Required: 40-50 minutes.

Lesson Overview:

Teachers are encouraged to invite a Grandmother/Grandfather, Knowledge Keeper, or Indigenous Educator who hold knowledge about Talking Circles if possible.

Students will learn about what to expect when attending a Pow Wow. Pipe Ceremony, Grand Entry, Feast, and Give-Away will be highlighted. Students will learn about the importance of tobacco, what is a tobacco offering, and the protocol surrounding tobacco. Students will learn about the importance of tobacco through a tobacco teaching and discussion. Students will interact with a short story about a youth named Muskegon, who is preparing to attend his first Pow Wow. Students will participate in a Talking Circle to talk about what they have learned so far about Pow Wows and think about how they personally relate to Pow Wow and ceremony. Students will reflect on their new knowledge by reflecting in their Trail Journals. This journal is designed as if they were travelling down the Pow Wow trail documenting their experiences.

Learning Outcomes:

- Students will understand and recognize the importance of tobacco.
- By the end of this lesson, students will be able to understand tobacco offering protocol, identify the appropriate times to offer tobacco and reflect upon their learning through a Talking Circles.

Materials and Equipment:

- Appendix 2.0: Tobacco Teaching
- Appendix 2.0.1: Tobacco and Tobacco Tie Photos

- Appendix 2.1: Talking Circle Guidelines
- Appendix 2.2: Welcome to the Pow-Wow Muskegon Short Story
- Talking Object (Grandfather Rock, or anything object pertinent to the classroom)
- Writing materials (pencils)
- Trail Journals

Activate: How will students be prepared for learning?

Tobacco Teaching

In this lesson, students will go over the proper protocol of Pow Wows, tobacco offerings, and Talking Circles. To begin the lesson, instruct students that they will continue their exploration of Pow Wows, and today they will be learning about proper and respectful protocols. Show students pictures of tobacco and tobacco ties. Alternatively, if you are able too, show students real life examples of tobacco and tobacco ties. Prompt students to think about the following questions:

1. What do you see in the pictures? Tobacco /Tobacco Ties

Say: In this picture we can see a photo of tobacco and a photo of a tobacco tie. A tobacco tie is typically tobacco wrapped in cloth to use as an offering.

2. What do you think this may be used for in Pow Wow or Ceremonies?

Say: Tobacco is often used as an offering or gift. In Pow Wows, dancers, delegates, and people being honoured are offered a tobacco tie. Tobacco can be offered to another person or to a fire. Offering tobacco is a respectful way to ask for guidance or teachings. Or to pray. When someone offers tobacco, they are agreeing to listen openly with their hearts and minds, without judgement. By accepting the tobacco, the person is agreeing to support you the best way they can.

Instruct students you will now read to them the Tobacco Teaching.

Acquire: What strategies facilitate learning for groups and individuals?

“Welcome to the Pow Wow Muskegon” Short Story

Moving on from the tobacco teaching, instruct students they will learn and explore more about protocol through the story of a boy named Muskegon (Mus-Kay-Gon)

Say:

“Today we will continue our journey learning about Pow Wows. We will read the short story “Welcome to the Pow Wow Muskegon”. This story is about a youth named Muskegon who is preparing to attend his first Pow Wow. In the story, Muskegon’s grandfather tells Muskegon what to expect when they go to Pow Wow, the protocols, and the agenda.”

This story is a refresher from the content learned from the Pow Wow Introduction video, as well as new information surrounding prayer and how to dress. After reading the story, instruct students to reflect on new understandings and conceptions they have about Pow Wows. Tell students to hold on to those thoughts as they will share them in a Talking Circle.

Apply: How will students demonstrate their understanding?

Talking Circle

Students will participate in a Talking Circle. In the Talking Circle students will have an opportunity to share and reflect on their learning thus far about Pow Wows. In the sacred circle, everyone is equal. Everyone gets the chance to share without judgement or conversation. One person shares while everyone else listens. Share the Talking Circle Guidelines with students. Instruct them to sit in a circle together. All participants should sit together, either on the floor or on chairs Use your discretion about who can/cannot sit on the floor. Use a talking object, such as a Grandfather Rock or an important object to the classroom such as a talking stick, pencil, etc. This object is passed in a clockwise direction (passed towards the Eastern direction).

Speaker: Only one person speaks at a time. The person holding the talking object may speak. Dialogues and conversations are not typically part of a Talking Circle. The speaker is encouraged to speak from the heart. They may talk for as long as needed. The speaker begins with introducing themselves. They may share their name and where they come from. After sharing their names, silence is an acceptable response when responding to a question or prompt. There must be no negative reactions to the phrase “I pass”. What is said in the Circle stays in the Circle. Unless you have permission of the speaker or there is a safety concern.

Listener: Whomever does not have the talking object has the role as a Listener. Listen with respect and non-judgement. Listen attentively and give support to the speaker. Listen with your heart and in a way, you expect others to hear you.

After getting students to sit in a circle, say:

“ We will be participating in a Talking Circle today. This is a safe space for us to share and reflect on our current understandings of Pow Wows. You may share new information you have learned or your own experiences with Pow Wows. I will begin by sharing my name, where I come from, and my reflection.”

The teacher will share their name, community/where they come from, and reflective experience. In sharing our names, we are welcoming each other to the Circle. This is the time that many Indigenous people will share their Spirit Names and Clans if they were given them through ceremony. By sharing where we come from (community) we are building kinship ties with each other. Sharing our communities could simply be a statement like “I live in Winnipeg”. Pass around the talking object and continue the Talking Circle.

Note: Talking Circles are safe spaces which may evoke strong emotions in participants. Crying is a normal phenomenon to occur in a Talking Circle. Please take caution and care in your students' emotions and provide tissues when needed. Have supports available for students if needed.

Extension: Smudging

If you are wanting to include Smudging before your Talking Circle, please refer to the Manitoba Education 2014 Smudging Protocol, the protocols of your school and school division, and Knowledge Keeper/Grandmother/Grandfather protocol.

Assessment:*Trail Journal

While exploring, learning, and reflecting about Pow Wows students will summarize their understandings in their Trail Journals. The Trail Journal is a self-reflective journal or diary style writing and drawing text where students can confidently share their thoughts, reflections, conceptions, and develop their point of views. Hand out a Trail Journal to each student. Advise them that this is a self-reflective journal where they can safely share their new understandings and wonders.

Early Years (K-4):

Instruct students that in their Trail Journal, for their second entry they will reflect on their emotions in the Talking Circle and their current understandings of Pow Wow. Ask them to reflect on the story about Muskegon and their experience with the Talking Circle. Students may draw themselves in the Talking Circle, their feelings during the Talking Circles, their feelings about Pow Wow, or a reflection about the short story. This journal is a way for students to reflect on their experiences safely and confidently. Each student may take something different away in each lesson. This activity is designed to get younger students to explore their feelings, their understandings, and relate themselves to Pow Wows.

Further Learning and Extensions:

Invite an Indigenous educator, Knowledge Keeper, or Grandmother/Grandfather to explore and learn more about tobacco and the other three sacred Medicines (cedar, sage, and sweetgrass).

Links to Manitoba Curriculum:

Please see section relating to this lesson plan in the Pow Wow Trail Teacher's Bundle Manitoba Curriculum Connections section.

Materials and Equipment:

- Appendix 3.0: Muskegon and the Pow Wow Trail
- Appendix 3.1: Blank Character Handout
- Appendix 3.3: Comic Strip Template
- Appendix 3.4: Comic Strip Rubric

- Pencils

Activate: How will students be prepared for learning?

Design Your Character: Muskegon

In this lesson, students will learn about what going down the Pow Wow Trail means to Indigenous peoples, families, and communities. To begin the lesson, instruct students that they will continue their exploration of Pow Wows, and today they will learn with the character Muskegon what going down the Pow Wow Trail means.

Say:

“Before we read another story about Muskegon (Mus-kay-gon), we need to design what the character looks like in our heads. So, when we are storytelling, we can imagine Muskegon more clearly in our heads. I will hand out a blank character and I want you to design Muskegon based on a little description I will give you. Think about his hair, face, and clothing.”

Read the following description to students:

“Muskegon (Mus-kay-gon) is a young Indigenous (Anishinaabe/Anishinaabe) boy around the age of ten. His skin is tanned from the sun and is now a soft sand colour. He is growing out his shiny dark brown hair that goes just past his ears. His hair flips upwards underneath an old green baseball cap. He has big brown eyes that his grandfather says reminds him of a brown bear’s fur. Muskegon has a big happy smile. He has freckles on his nose from playing in the sun. Muskegon wears a red t-shirt with a small hole in the right arm. He has dark blue jeans that have a few grass stains. Muskegon’s favourite thing is his big brown boots that are caked in a little bit of mud.”

Instruct students to draw their interpretations of Muskegon on the blank character handout. Encourage students to use lots of details and colour. Prompt students with the following questions:

1. What are the features of a face? Remember to draw eyes, a nose, a mouth, ears.
2. What should you draw to create a t-shirt? Jeans? Boots?

Acquire: What strategies facilitate learning for groups and individuals?

“Muskegon and the Pow Wow Trail” Short Story

After creating their own interpretations of Muskegon, instruct students they will now listen to the story of Muskegon and the Pow-Wow Trail.

Say:

“Today we will continue our journey learning about Pow Wows. We will read the short story “Muskegon and the Pow Wow Trail”. In this story, Muskegon is driving with his grandfather on their way to their first Pow Wow of the summer. In the story, Muskegon’s grandfather tells Muskegon that the Pow Wow Trail is the series of Pow Wows that they have planned to attend this summer. He tells Muskegon how they will be attending a Pow Wow in Winnipeg, and then travel all over Manitoba to different communities Pow Wows. Muskegon’s grandfather goes on to teach him about the importance of Pow Wow to Indigenous communities. Let us read.”

This story includes new understandings about the significance of Pow Wows for Indigenous peoples, families, and communities. In the story, Muskegon’s grandfather talks about why Pow Wows are important. This story scaffolds off learning students would have learned from the Pow Wow Introduction video.

Apply: How will students demonstrate their understanding?

Muskegon and the Pow Wow Trail Comic Strip

After reading the story, students will reflect and recall the story as they will sequence the events and design a comic strip. In the Comic Strip students will choose a part of the story to create into a comic strip.

Hand out the Comic Strip template to each student. Each student should have their own copy of the story to refer to. Ensure each student has a pencil and colouring materials such as pencil crayons.

Say:

“Now that we read the story, you will choose a part of the story to create a four-frame comic strip. You may read the story one more time to pick a part that sticks out to you. In each of your frames, include speech bubbles or narration. Make sure you have details and lots of colour.”

Go over the rubric with students so they are aware of the expectations of their comics. You may give students a copy of the rubric to refer to while they are working.

Assessment:

Comic Strip Rubric:

This rubric can either be used by the teacher as a form of formative or summative assessment. It can also be used by the student to self-reflect and give themselves a mark on their assignment.

Trail Journal

While exploring, learning, and reflecting about Pow Wows students will summarize their understandings in their Trail Journals. The Trail Journal is a self-reflective journal or diary style writing and drawing text where students can confidently share their thoughts, reflections, conceptions, and develop their point of views.

Hand out the Trail Journal to each student. In their third journal entry students will reflect on how they think Muskegon felt at the end of the story, and a time they felt great excitement.

Women’s Dance Infographic Posters

After listening to the story, students will reflect and recall the story and videos as they will create infographic posters about one of the Women’s Dances. An infographic poster is a graphic visual representation of information and knowledge intended to present information clearly. The posters can either be made digitally or by hand.

Split the class evenly with half the students creating an infographic poster about Jingle Dress Dancing, and the other half creating an infographic poster about Women’s Traditional Dancing.

Say:

“In the videos we watched, and the story we listened to, there were a lot of new words. We are going to display the knowledge we have learned about Jingle Dress Dancing and Women's Traditional Dancing by creating infographic posters. An infographic poster is a visual that shows images and information about a topic.

Women's Dance Infographic Poster Instructions

In the student's infographic posters, they should include the following:

1. One graphic (drawn or digital) of the Regalia
2. The name of the dance
3. 3-5 facts about the dance and Regalia

- 2) What role do Dancers have during the Women's Traditional Dance?
  - a) *Responses may vary but must include something along the lines of: It is a dance that supports everyone/the men in the centre.

Further Learning and Extensions:

Side-Step Dance

Students can learn how to do the side-step featured in Jingle Dress Dancing. By watching the video Watch Come Dance with Me - Side Step by CBC Kids:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=\_0dTe9IqKhQ&t=44s&pp=ygUVcG93IHdvdyBzb25nIGFuZCBkcjVt

Note:

All students can respectfully learn the side-step dance. It is important for all students to learn so; they can attend a Pow Wow and participate in the Intertribal dances. Learning the side-step dance can also be a learning opportunity for Indigenous students wanting to participate in Pow Wows.

Please see section relating to this lesson plan in the Pow Wow Trail Teacher's Bundle Manitoba Curriculum Connections section.

Lesson Nine: The Stories Within the Men's Dances

Title: The Stories Within the Men's Dances.

Theme: Men's Dances.

Grade Level: 3-5.

Subject(s): Social Studies, Science.

Time Required: 40-50 minutes.

Lesson Overview:

Teachers will need to find a large outdoor space for this activity such as a school field or a nearby park. Go over pertinent safety protocols with students if leaving the school grounds.

Students will learn about the different dances that Men and 2SLBQTQQIA+ people dance to at Pow Wows. Students will watch videos on Men's Traditional and Grass Dance and the respective Regalia. Students will listen to a read aloud story about Muskegon continuing his Pow Wow journey watching the Men's dance categories. Students will reflect upon the teachings from Wes Nelson about storytelling and the Land and will build kinship with the Land by creating a Living Tree Story. Students will go out onto the Land, whether in their school playground or a nearby park. Students will find either a tree, bush, or other natural element and sit with it. After watching the tree/bush, students will draw a sketch of their trees. Once completed, students will create an oral story about their tree. Fictional or non-fictional. For example, perhaps the student will write a story about how their Tree has a name and is best friends with a bird. Or the story is about the tree being excited for its first buds of Spring. The possibilities are endless with the types of stories the youth will produce. Afterwards, students will add to their Trail Journals about what they have learned about Men's Dances and the importance of honouring the Land.

Learning Outcomes:

- Students will recognize the significance of Grass Dancing and the Regalia.
- Students will recognize the significance of Men's Traditional Dance and the Regalia.
- Students will create a visual representation of a Tree and a story to go along with their visual representations.
- By the end of this lesson, students will be able to recognize two Men's dances that are honoured at Pow Wows - Men's Traditional and Grass Dance. Students will build a relationship with, and deeper understanding of, the Land.

Materials and Equipment:

- Appendix 5.0: The Storytelling Dance
- White paper or sketch books
- Clipboards
- Pencils
- Projector/ Screen
- Computer Access
- Safe spot on the Land for students to sit.
  - i.e., playground, field, nearby park, etc.

Activate: How will students be prepared for learning?

Pow Wow Videos: Grass Dance and Men's Traditional

In this lesson, students will learn about two types of Men dances, Grass Dance and Men's Traditional. To begin the lesson, instruct students that today they will continue to learn about types of Pow Wow dances. Today they will explore two different dances performed by Men and 2SLGBTQQIA+ people. The dances are called Grass Dance and Men's Traditional.

Play Video 4: Grass Dance

1. What does the Grass Dance represent? The prairie/grass moving in the wind.
2. What do Grass Dancers do to the grounds? They bless the grounds.
3. What way do you dance while Grass Dancing? Dance with one leg, and then repeat with the other leg.

After discussing the three questions, play Video 5: Men's Traditional.

After the video, prompt students with the following questions:

1. What is another name for Men's Traditional Dance? Storytelling Dance
2. What does Wes Nelson say he wants to leave behind? Good Tracks
3. What way do you move while dancing Men's Traditional? Step back and forth.

Acquire: What strategies facilitate learning for groups and individuals?

“The Storytelling Dance” Short Story

After watching and summarizing the two Men's Dances videos, instruct students they will now listen to, choral read or silent read to themselves the story of The Storytelling Dance

Say:

“Today we will continue our journey learning about the different kinds of Pow Wow Dances. We will read the short story “The Storytelling Dance”. In this story, Muskegon is enjoying his first Pow Wow. He meets one of his grandpa's old friends, Koda, who teaches him about Men's Traditional Dance.

This story includes new understandings about Men's Traditional dancing. This story scaffolds off learning students would have learned from the two videos on men's Pow Wow dancing.

Apply: How will students demonstrate their understanding?

Living Tree Story

After listening to the story, students will reflect upon the teachings from Wes Nelson and The Storytelling Dance story about storytelling and the Land. In Men's Traditional dancing, there is a strong emphasis on acknowledging our connections to the Earth and honouring the plants and animals. Men's Traditional teaches us to be aware of the tracks we are leaving behind. By getting students out onto the Land and taking a moment to build a relationship with the natural elements. Students will start to build the capacity to care and understand the importance of the Earth. In this lesson, students will continue to build their kinship to the Land by creating a Living Tree Story.

This part of the lesson will need to take part outside, somewhere where there are trees or bushes visible.

Instruct students that they will take the teachings from Wes Nelson and the teachings from Men's Traditional dance and go out onto the Land. Students will go out outside, whether in the school playground or a nearby park.

Students will need to find either a tree, bush, or other natural element and sit with it. After watching the tree/bush, students will draw a sketch of their trees. Once completed, students will create an oral story about their tree. Fictional or non-fictional. For example, perhaps the student will write a story about how their Tree has a name and is best friends with a bird. Or the story is about the tree being excited for its first buds of Spring. The possibilities are endless with the types of stories the youth will produce.

Say:

“We will take our learning outside today to learn from the Land. We will go outside and create Living Tree stories. A Living Tree Story is a fictional, or non-fictional, story that you will create after you spend some time look and sketching one of the trees found around our school (or park). By taking the time to look at the tree, draw it, and spend time with the tree, you will build a relationship with it! Wes Nelson taught us that in life we need to honour the Earth and we all leave tracks behind us. By creating a story about a tree, we are building the capacity to love the Earth even more. Let us go outside.”

When outside, have students find a tree/bush that they want to spend time with, sketch, and create a story about. Instruct students to find a spot where they will work successfully. Once students are ready, hand out a pencil, clipboard, and white paper or a sketch book. Instruct students to look at their tree. Draw everything they see.

Prompt students with the following questions:

1. Do you see any buds or leaves on the tree?
2. How tall is the tree?
3. Are there any other plants around it?
4. To whom is this tree home?

Once students are done with their sketches. They may produce their stories. They could produce an oral or written representation of their story. When students are all ready to share their stories, classrooms can create a Talking Circle on the Land or back in the classroom. Following the Talking Circle protocol, students can share their stories with the rest of the class as well as, any feelings or new understandings they have after today's lesson.

Assessment:

Trail Journal

While exploring, learning, and reflecting about Pow Wows students will summarize their understandings in their Trail Journals. The Trail Journal is a self-reflective journal or diary style writing and drawing text where students can confidently share their thoughts, reflections, conceptions, and develop their point of views.

Hand out the Trail Journal to each student. In their fifth journal entry students will reflect on what they have learned about both Grass and Men's Traditional Dancing.

In their entry, they will answer the questions:

1. How does Grass Dance represent the Prairies?

1. Responses may vary but must include something along the lines of: It is a dance that represents the grass blowing in the wind. It is done to bless the grounds of the Pow Wow.

2. What is the Storytelling Dance?

1. Responses may vary but must include something along the lines of: It is a dance that tells a story. The dance honours animals and Earth. The dance leaves behind good tracks.

Further Learning and Extensions:

Cottonball Meets Dreyden: A Pow Wow Grass Dancer

Students can learn more about Grass Dance by watching the video Cottonball Meets Dreyden: A Pow Wow Grass Dancer by CBC Kids:

Lesson Ten: The Heartbeat of the Drum

Title: The Heartbeat of the Drum.

Grade Level: 3-5 and 6-8.

Subject(s): English Language Arts, Social Studies.

Time Required: 40-50 minutes.

Lesson Overview:

If you are inviting a Grandmother/Grandfather, Knowledge Keeper, or an Indigenous Educator who holds knowledge about Drums, please follow the appropriate Tobacco and/or Guest protocols.

Students will learn about the importance of the Drum, Drum groups at Pow Wow, and different songs that are presented at Pow Wow such as the Flag song and Veterans song. Students will listen to Drumming (real or video) to experience the heartbeat sound that the Drum creates. Using knowledge learned in Muskegon and the Drum, students will apply their knowledge to analyze a Drum song. Students will watch a series of three videos of different Drum groups performing at Manito Ahbee. Students will identify the lead, the second, if there was an honour beat, and how many push-ups are in the song. Students will reflect on their learning through their Trail Journals.

Learning Outcomes:

- Students will compare the sounds of the Drum to the sounds of a heartbeat.
- Students will perform an analysis of a Drum song. Students will identify the lead, the second, if there was an honour beat, and how many push-ups are in the song.
- By the end of this lesson, students will gain an understanding about the significance of the Drum and the types of songs sung at Pow Wows.

The (Heart) Beat of the Drum

In this lesson, students will learn about the importance of the Drum. Students will learn how there are different Drum groups represented at Pow Wows. As well as there are different songs played at Pow Wows. Students will begin their lesson with listening to the Drum being played. By introducing Drumming to students, they will be able to build a familiarity with the beat of the Drum. In this part of the lesson, students will compare the sounds of Drumming to the sounds of a heart beating. This lesson can either be done by someone Drumming in real-life or by listening to Bear Inniniwak playing their Drum at Manito Ahbee.

To begin the lesson, play the Intertribal Contest song by Bear Inniniwak from Manito Ahbee 2019. Encourage students to listen to the song rather than watch the video. Invite students to close their eyes as they listen.

Say:

“Today, we will continue our learning journey about Pow Wow. We are going to focus our learning on the music at Pow Wows. There are many songs that are represented at Pow Wows, such as the Flag Song, the Veterans Song, Intertribal Songs, and more. We are going to listen with our ears and hearts to a video and discuss it!”

Prompt students with the following questions and statements as they listen to the video (or to someone playing the Drum)

1. What do you hear? What instrument is being played?

Answers may vary. Singing and Drumming are acceptable responses.

2. What does the Drumming remind you of? Think about the beat.

Answers may vary. Look for the answer “heartbeat”.

3. How do you think that a Drumbeat, and heartbeat are similar? How are they different?

Answers will vary.

Acquire: What strategies facilitate learning for groups and individuals?

“Muskegon and the Drum” Short Story

After listening with their ears and hearts to Drumming, instruct students they will now listen to the last story in the Muskegon short story series.

Say:

“We will read the last story in the Muskegon story series. This is where our journey ends with Muskegon but the learning he has provided us about Pow Wows will continue in our bodies, hearts, minds, and spirits. In our story today, Muskegon is learning about the Drum. In this story, Muskegon learns about the role of Drumming at Pow Wows, the parts of the Drum, and what kind of songs are sung at Pow Wows. Let us read.”

During and after the story, prompt students with the following questions:

1. What job do the Drummers have at Pow Wows?

Drummers are responsible/have the job of singing the songs.

2. What kind of songs are sung at Pow Wows?

Answers will vary. Grand Entry, dance contests, intertribal songs, honouring songs, Flag song, Veterans song, etc.

3. What are some of the parts of the Drum?

Wooden frame or hoop and rawhide (lacing and for the Drumhead).

4. What does the Drum represent?

Mother Earth and her heartbeat.

Apply: How will students demonstrate their understanding?

Analyzing a Drum Song

After listening to the story, students will watch, and complete an analysis of, three videos from the Manito Ahbee Pow Wow Festival. Students will listen to songs by Drum groups Bear Inniniwak, Young Spirit, and Northern Inniniwak. In the videos, students will identify the lead singer, and the number of push-ups done in the song.

Say:

“On our learning journey today, we have been learning about the importance of the Drum, the parts of the Drum, and the different kinds of songs that are sung at Pow Wows. We are now going to listen to a few Drum Groups that were honoured at past Manito Ahbee Pow Wows. In each song that a Drum Group performs, there is a similar song structure that all Pow Wow songs follow. There is a lead singer, who selects and starts the song. There are parts called leads in each song. The song starts off with the Drummers synchronising their Drumbeats. Once the beat is established, the lead singer starts off by singing the lead alone. The rest of the group then joins by repeating the lead. This part is called the second. It is a repetition of the opening lead. After the first lead, the singers will sing the rest of the song. This process is then repeated. Each part repeated is called a push-up. Songs are typically sung four times to reflect the sacred knowledge surrounding the number four from First Nations beliefs. For example, there are four directions (East, South, West, and North) and the four sacred plants (Tobacco, Cedar, Sage, and Sweetgrass).

In some Pow Wow songs, participants may even hear accents added to the Drumming pattern. There are different purposes to the accent beats such as bringing the group back into sync or to signal a change. There is also a spiritual part to accent beats.

Accent beats are also referred to as honour beats. Honour beats serve to acknowledge Creator and the dancers.

We will analyze these songs to identify the lead, the second, if there was an honour beat, and how many push-ups are in the song.”

Drum Analysis Instructions

On the Drum Analysis handout, students will:

- Write out the Drum Group name,
- Checkmark if they identify, or hear, the lead part of the song,
- Checkmark if they identify, or hear, the second part of the song,
- Checkmark if they identify, or hear, an honour beat,
- Write tally marks or numbers for how many push-ups they hear in the song.

Assessment:

Trail Journal

While exploring, learning, and reflecting about Pow Wows students will summarize their understandings in their Trail Journals. The Trail Journal is a self-reflective journal or diary style writing and drawing text where students can confidently share their thoughts, reflections, conceptions, and develop their point of views.

Hand out the Trail Journal to each student. In their sixth journal entry students will reflect on their new learnings and understandings about Drumming and singing.

Grades 3-5:

Instruct students to draw and label a picture that represents the Drum, the heartbeat, and Mother Earth.

Grades 6-8:

Instruct students to answer the following prompt:

1. How is Drumming connected to Mother Earth?

The sound represents a heartbeat.

2. Name three songs that are played at a Pow Wow:

Grand Entry, Flag Song, Veterans Songs, Dance Contests, Intertribal, etc.

Tobacco Teaching

This is just one First Nations (Anishinaabe) perspective on the significance of Tobacco.

Tobacco is one of the four sacred Medicines. The four sacred Medicines represent the four directions. Tobacco represents East. Tobacco is used in First Nations communities in many ways. Tobacco can be used in prayer, as an offering, or smoked in a sacred pipe. Tobacco was the first plant gifted to us by Creator and is our connection to the spirit world. When burned, tobacco opens the door to the spirit world for communication to happen. When we burn tobacco, such as when a sacred pipe is smoked or when making an offering in a sacred fire, our words are being brought to the spirits and Creator.

Tobacco Offering:

Tobacco is one of the hardest plants to grow. It uses a lot of time, care, and resources to grow just one plant. Offering tobacco is seen as a sign of great respect. Tobacco can be offered to the Land or to one another. Typically, tobacco is offered before we pick Medicines or take something from the Land. Tobacco is also offered to one another. Someone may offer tobacco in exchange for knowledge, teachings, songs, advice, Spirit Names, or prayers. Offering tobacco shows respect and gratitude. When offering tobacco, the recipient can either accept or decline. Offering tobacco to a person is forming a connection between the people. Tobacco offerings are the oldest form of a contract. People may decline tobacco for many reasons. For example, perhaps they are not comfortable or feel they are a right fit for the request.

Tobacco Ties:

Tobacco Ties are created to offer tobacco. A tobacco tie is made typically made from broad cloth and string. Tobacco ties can come in different colours however, they are usually made with red or yellow cloth. When making a tobacco tie, you would want to use traditional or ceremonial tobacco. Use commercial loose tobacco if there is nothing else available. When preparing your tobacco tie, place a small amount in the centre of a small square of cloth. Fold all the ends of the cloth together and tie with a piece of string.

Talking Circle Guidelines

This is just one First Nations (Anishinaabe) perspective on Talking Circles.

Speaker: Only one person speaks at a time. The person holding the talking object may speak. Dialogues and conversations are not typically part of a Talking Circle. The speaker is encouraged to speak from the heart. They may talk for as long as needed. The speaker begins with introducing themselves. Silence is an acceptable response when responding to a question or prompt. There must be no negative reactions to the phrase “I pass”.

Listener: Whomever does not have the talking object has the role as a Listener. Listen with respect and non-judgement. Listen attentively and give support to the speaker. Listen with your heart and in a way you expect others to hear you.

Guidelines:

1. All participants sit in a circle.
2. Participants sit together whether all on the floor or all on chairs. Sitting on the ground brings participants closer to Creator as they are seated upon Mother Earth.
3. Use a Talking Object such as a Grandfather Rock. The Talking Object is passed in a clockwise direction (to the East).
4. One person speaks at a time. Only the person holding the Talking Object should speak.
5. When speaking, first introduce yourself. You may say your name, your spirit name and clan if applicable, and your community. After introducing yourself, you can start Talking. We share our names as they hold great importance.
6. When not speaking, you play the role as a Listener. Listen with intention from the heart and respect.
7. Keeping the Circle - Participants make a commitment to attend and remain until the Talking Circle is completed. Once the Talking Circle has begun, try to keep disruptions to a minimum. Typically, no one leaves until the Talking Circle is complete.

Welcome to the Pow Wow Muskegon!

By: Marika Schalla

“Good morning, Muskegon! It is time to wake up.” Grandpa called out as he gently opened the curtains. Muskegon rubbed his eyes as he slowly moved out of bed. “Good morning, Grandpa! What a beautiful morning it is today. How are you doing?” Muskegon asked. Grandpa smiled. He replied “I am feeling great. I am excited as today we are starting our journey to our first Pow Wow this year. Why, I think this is your first Pow Wow ever! So, I need you to go brush your teeth and get dressed. Granny is almost done making breakfast.” Muskegon looked at grandpa with a puzzled face “Okay Grandpa but... what do I even wear? In fact, I never been to a Pow Wow. So, what do I bring? What am I going to see? Who am I going to see?” Muskegon felt like his head was going in all four directions. “Now, now, Muskegon.” Grandpa said reassuringly. “There is no need to worry. Why don’t you put on your favourite shirt and jeans and meet me in the kitchen for breakfast. Then, we can talk about what to expect at your first Pow Wow.”

Muskegon was so excited. He had heard many stories before about his family’s experience at Pow Wows. Grandpa would tell tales about the beautiful regalia, the intricate dances, and the amazing food they would eat at the Feasts. Grandpa said that Granny would be cooking up a storm for days before they hit the Pow Wow Trail. Whether it was for road snacks or to share with the community. Muskegon pulled on his favourite red t-shirt. There was a small hole in the arm from when the shirt got caught on a branch while Muskegon was apple picking with his Granny. He pulled on his jeans and white socks. Muskegon grabbed his lucky green baseball cap and headed downstairs for breakfast. The smell of scrambled eggs and fried bologna filled the air. He could hear the coffee machine sputtering and people talking. Muskegon walked into the kitchen as Granny was plating up the food. His older sister raced to the table. “So, what do you think Grandpa?” asked Muskegon as he did a spin to show off his clothes. “Are these clothes appropriate for the Pow Wow?” Grandpa chortled. “Yes, Muskegon. Those are fine to wear to the Pow Wow. When we get there, you will see people wearing all sorts of clothing and regalia. There will be people wearing ribbon shirts and ribbon skirts and there will also be people dressed more comfortably. Such as in t shirts, dresses, and shorts. Women and young girls typically wear long skirts to honour their natural connection with Mother Earth. So, female, and female-identifying individuals are welcomed to do so but, it is up to each person. There will be many people who will be wearing beaded jewellery such as earrings and necklaces. You may even see a kokum scarf or two. Any footwear is fine. People may be wearing moccasins, sneakers, or sandals. As a spectator, or visitor, to a Pow Wow, there is no right or wrong thing to wear. Just make sure you are dressed modestly and respectfully. So, participants should not wear anything with any negative images or words. We need to remember that there will be little ones and Elders around. So, we want to be good leaders when we are attending a Pow Wow.”

Muskegon sat down beside Grandpa as Granny handed him a plate. “Now Muskegon, you know how much your Grandpa loves to talk. Eat your breakfast while you are listening”. Granny joked as she gave Grandpa a hug. “Oh yes, you will also see the dancers dressed in their regalia!” Grandpa exclaimed as he put sugar into his coffee. “There will be all kinds of different regalia. Jingle dresses, grass dance regalia, and traditional to name a few. There are stories and significance in everything the dancer’s wear. So, make sure you are watching, and learning, from each of the dances.”

Muskegon’s older sister, Nibi, chimed in. “Oh, speaking of the dancers. You will want to get a good spot to watch them dance. You will want to find somewhere to sit outside the Arbour because that is where people will be dancing. When you enter the Pow Wow, you will see the Arbour surrounded by chairs, tables, and drums. It is like a huge Circle! You may want to bring a blanket and chair with you to sit on.” Muskegon grabbed a piece of toast and chewed while listening to his sister and Grandpa speak. “Okay, so no sitting in the Circle. What are some other protocols of a Pow Wow?” Muskegon asked. “Well, the most helpful thing you can do during a Pow Wow is to listen to the Emcee. They help run the Pow Wow and will announce the dancers, singers, and drummers. As well as, what to expect during any specific time. Such as when we should stand or when there should be no photographs taken.” Grandpa replied. “As for standing, typically we stand when there are prayers being done and during Grand Entry. Grand Entry is the official start to the Pow Wow. The Eagle Staff will lead in the Veterans, dignitaries, anyone being honoured, and the dancers. During this time, we will stand and remove our hats out of respect. In this time, we are honouring life and the Gift that beginnings are. We honour this beginning through Prayer in the form of an Honour Song.” “Oh, I am so excited to hear all the songs and the drums.” Muskegon said excitedly. I wonder if they will let me touch the drumstick!” Grandpa laughed and replied “Now you see here Muskegon, we need to ask before we touch any sacred or important item. The most respectful thing we can do before asking any kind of question, is to offer tobacco.” “Oh! Okay, I think I have some tobacco ties in my room. I will make sure I grab a few before we leave. What happens after the Grand Entry?” Muskegon asked. “During the Pow Wow, there are important events and prayers that happen before the Grand Entry even start. There will be a blessing of the grounds. Typically done by the Grass Dancers. At some Pow Wows, there will be a Pipe Ceremony before Grand Entry. This is to send our prayers up to Creator and start the day in a good way. After Grand Entry, you will hear a Veterans song. Then, there will be introductions of important people such as Flag Carriers, Elders, and dignitaries. After this, the dancing will begin. Now, let us hurry up and finish getting ready or else we are going to miss Grand Entry,” said Grandpa.

Muskegon hurriedly finished his breakfast before racing back upstairs. He grabbed a few tobacco ties that he made recently with his Granny. Muskegon pulled out his duffel bag and packed a few shirts, pants, and his moccasins. As they were going to be gone for a few days. Muskegon peered into his closet to find his good ribbon shirt. He wanted to have it just in case he wanted to dress up a little bit. As he was pulling on his brown boots, Grandpa called “time to go, Muskegon. We will meet you in the van!” Muskegon could barely hold in his excitement. “I will be right down, Grandpa!” Muskegon replied as he zipped up his duffel bag. As he walked outside, Muskegon heard the chickadees singing and felt a light breeze. “This will be a great day” he said to himself.

Muskegon and the Pow Wow Trail

By: Marika Schalla

Today, Muskegon was going to attend his first Pow Wow. His family have been going to Pow Wows for generations however, Muskegon never got the chance to attend until today. This was his first summer he was spending at his grandparents' house. Since he was a bit older now too, Grandpa thought it would be an excellent idea to bring Muskegon along the Pow Wow Trail. Muskegon, his older sister Nibi, and their grandparents had been driving for a few hours and would soon arrive in Winnipeg. Muskegon was feeling excited but nervous. He was listening to his Grandpa and Granny talk about the Pow Wow Trail. When Muskegon was younger, he imagined that the Pow Wow Trail was a long path that Pow Wow Dancers danced along. He now knew that the Pow Wow Trail is just a term used for the list of different Pow Wows in the summer that families, dancers, or visitors planned to attend. Grandpa and Granny were excitedly talking about all the Pow Wows they were intending on visiting this summer. Muskegon had heard many stories about Pow Wows before from his family but did not quite understand why Indigenous people did them. He decided now would be a good time to ask Grandpa before they arrived at their destination.

“Grandpa? Why do we have Pow Wows?” asked Muskegon. “Well, you see my boy, at Pow Wows we get to express ourselves through the living Spirit of Dance and Song. Indigenous peoples were not always allowed to sing our songs, drum, or practice our ceremonies. So, dancing in Pow Wow is an act of resilience and honours our culture.” Muskegon felt a little shocked. What did Grandpa mean Indigenous people could not sing and dance? Muskegon felt like he was left with even more questions “What do you mean we could not practice our ceremonies? Muskegon asked. Grandpa thought to himself for a moment before replying to him. “Indigenous ceremonies were banned in 1884. At this time, this meant our Pow Wows were too. Any families who participated in ceremonies could get arrested. There were some unfair laws and Indigenous people were not always treated with kindness. We have come a long way in terms of our rights and being accepted. Our people are smart and came up with ways to overcome these barriers. So, Pow Wows shifted from a ceremonial focus to a social focus. Back then, this was the only way Indigenous people were allowed to publicly gather to sing, drum, and dance.” said Grandpa quietly.

Muskegon sat up straight in his seat. He was very interested in learning more about the background and history of Pow Wows. “Well, what happened after 1884? How did Indigenous people start to celebrate Pow Wows like we do today?” Grandpa laughed. “I always love all your questions, Muskegon. You are a great listener. Well, to answer your original question. Pow Wows were first created sometime in the 1830s in First Nations communities across Turtle Island. When reserves were created, Indigenous peoples created Pow Wows in response. Pow Wows were a way to maintain our connection to our traditions, ceremony, and Creator through songs and dance. They have always been an act of resistance. After our ceremonies and dances were banned, Pow Wows continued in secret. It wouldn’t be until 1951, that we were allowed to continue our traditional ceremonies again without fear of being arrested. This was when the Indian Act was changed to allow for ceremonies. It took a few years for communities to fully enact Pow Wows. It wasn’t until the 1960s when Pow Wows became popular and were being held in communities throughout Turtle Island again. This was when your old Grandpa here was a boy like you. Modern-day Pow Wows as we know them were born!” Grandpa said triumphantly. By this time, Muskegon was smiling ear to ear and at the edge of his seat.

Learning about Pow Wows from Grandpa had been such a rollercoaster and Muskegon yearned to learn more. “What do you mean by modern-day Pow Wows, Grandpa? How are they different from the ones back in the 1830s?” Grandpa took a sip of water before he answered. By this time Nibi was also completely entranced by Grandpa’s story. “Modern-day Pow Wows can be either traditional or competitive. Usually, Traditional Pow Wows are held in our local communities and do not have dance or drum group competitions. Traditional Pow Wows are a special form of Prayer and ceremony. Either all the participants are given an honorarium equally or no payment is provided. Competitive Pow Wows, however, feature dance specials where dancers are judged based on their regalia and footwork. The individuals who score highest in their category will receive an award or a cash prize. At our modern-day Pow Wows, you may also see people selling food, vendors, and other events. I've even heard of some Pow Wows these days having Fashion Shows and youth gatherings. Pow Wows are truly a celebration of Indigenous brilliance and the beauty of our culture and ways of knowing." Grandpa said with a toothy smile.

Muskegon felt a sense of deep pride. Just as Grandpa finished speaking, the van came to a stop. "What a great way to end our ride. We are here now kids!" exclaimed Granny. Muskegon stared out the window as he saw rows and rows of cars. He could hear people talking and laughing from all around him. The Pow Wow was about to begin!

Muskegon and the Jingle Dress

By: Marika Schalla

“Wow, that was amazing!” exclaimed Muskegon as the Grand Entry completed. “Everyone please join us for an Intertribal dance!” called out the Emcee. Muskegon wiggled in his seat as people all around him got up to join the intertribal dance. “C’mon Muskegon, let’s go dance!” Nibi said as she grabbed Muskegon’s hand. Muskegon got up and looked down at his spot. “But, what about our things? Do we just leave them here?” Muskegon questioned Nibi. “We will just put our blankets over our chairs, and we will be okay. It is like an unspoken rule at Pow Wows that if there is a blanket covering a chair, that spot is taken.” Nibi explained to Muskegon. Muskegon and Nibi raced down to dance with everyone. While they were dancing, Muskegon noticed that there were people of all shapes, sizes, and races dancing. In an intertribal dance, anyone can join in. Regalia or no regalia. Indigenous or non-Indigenous. The intertribal dance celebrates all visitors at a Pow Wow. Muskegon kicked his feet up as if he were jigging. He then noticed a girl dancing beside him wearing a beautiful purple Jingle Dress. Muskegon remembered what Grandpa said about offering tobacco. So, he reached into his pocket and grabbed a small red tobacco tie. Muskegon looked at the girl and held out the tobacco tie. “Boozhoo, Muskegon ndizhnikaaz. I was wondering if I could ask you about your regalia. I do not know much about Jingle Dresses.” The girl stopped dancing and looked at Muskegon. She smiled ear to ear and gently took the tobacco from Muskegon’s hand. “Aniin! I am Margaret. I would love to tell you about my regalia. Let’s go sit there with my mom!”. Margaret said as she grabbed Muskegon's hand to lead him to her spot.

Muskegon and Margaret sat down in the stands. Muskegon was very interested in learning more about Jingle Dresses. As Margaret twirled the tobacco tie in her hand, she began to talk. “Thank you, Miigwech, for offering me tobacco. I am honoured you asked me to teach you more about Jingle Dresses!” Margaret said with a big smile. “So, what do you want to know?”. Muskegon rubbed his chin. There were so many questions he had about regalia and did not know where to begin. “Why do dancers wear jingles on their dresses? The jingles are beautiful, but I do not know the story behind them.” Margaret giggled as she began to speak. “Well, you see The Jingle Dress Dance came to be many moons ago when a young girl like us named Maggie Smith became ill. Her grandfather that night dreamt of a Healing Dance where the women wore special metal cones on a dress. In his dreams, four women danced and taught him how to make the dress. The women taught him how to do the special dance and what kind of songs to play with it. In his dreams, the Spirits told him that making the dress and having his granddaughter dance in it will help heal her. Maggie’s grandfather went to work and created the dress for her. As Maggie performed the dance, she started to get stronger. The more she danced, the better she felt. Until she was eventually cured and healthy once again.” Muskegon looked at Margaret with wide eyes. She was an excellent storyteller. Muskegon looked around as the intertribal dances were ending.

Margaret looked around too and then continued. “Today, the Jingle Dress Dance is performed by people across Turtle Island. Since it is a Healing Dance, the sickness gets trapped in the jingles. The dance is done by moving forward. The dancer must never move backwards or else the sickness that they are trying to heal will not go away. While the dancer is dancing, they stand up tall and proud. Dancers place their hands on their hips. As they dance, the cones make a special sound.” Muskegon pushed his hair out of his eyes as Margaret was finishing her story. “I am so happy to hear little Maggie was better after doing the Healing Dance.” Muskegon replied. “Now I understand the importance of the jingles on a Jingle Dress. What a powerful dance. I was noticing that there are lots of different kinds of regalia here today. Besides the jingles, is there a difference between a Jingle Dress or a Traditional regalia?” Muskegon asked with anticipation. Margaret smiled and replied “You just love learning, hey Muskegon! Well, the regalia of the Jingle Dress also includes a bandolier bag, feather fan, and beadwork. In the bandolier bag, women will carry tobacco. Traditionally, there are 365 jingles on a single dress. This number of jingles represents each day of the year. Regalia is often a form of self-expression and can be many different colours or designs. Sometimes designs are carried down from generation to generation. Other times, dancers use their regalia to express themselves. When regalia is being made, it is important that the person is thinking good thoughts and prayers for the dancer who will be wearing the dress. I wear this purple Jingle Dress as it was passed down to me by my older sisters. Our grandma dreamt of this dress when my eldest sister was a baby. She saw a sky of deep purple and blue. With specks of orange. That is why I have blue and orange in my beadwork too.” Margaret said as she handed one of her beaded earrings to Muskegon to see. “Thank you so much Margaret for teaching me about the Jingle Dress. I can’t wait to watch you da-” “JINGLE DRESS SPECIAL STARTING” the Emcee called out, interrupting Muskegon. “Well, I better get going! I will see you later, Muskegon.” Margaret said as she jumped from the bleaches. Muskegon got up and went to find Nibi. He did not want to miss this dance!

The Storytelling Dance

By: Marika Schalla

The Women's Dances were ending at the Pow Wow. Muskegon and his sister, Nibi, just sat down to enjoy their lemonade and taco in a bag. Muskegon looked around to see if he could find Grandpa and Granny. At big events, his Grandpa was known to always find a cousin or two in the crowd. Muskegon locked eyes across the Arbour with Grandpa. He was talking to a gentleman that was decked out in Men's Traditional Regalia. Muskegon looked in awe at the man's feathered roach and bustle. His regalia looked magnificent with colours of red, yellow, and brown. Muskegon wanted to know why the man's regalia looked so fancy. So, he stood up to go find his Grandpa.

Muskegon walked around the Arbour. Watching everyone prepare for the upcoming Men's Dance category. Muskegon knew he better hurry up before the man disappeared. He walked hurriedly up to Grandpa, almost bumping into him. "Muskegon my boy! Good to see you. Are you enjoying yourself so far today?" said Grandpa. "Oh yes, of course Grandpa! I have made a few new friends already today." replied Muskegon with a big smile. He was hoping Grandpa would introduce the man to him. "That is so great to hear you are making new friends. Why not make one more? Muskegon, this gentleman's name is Koda Whitecloud." Muskegon turned to look at Koda but was suddenly pulled forward. Koda grabbed Muskegon's hand and gave it a strong shake. "Please to meet you, Muskegon! You can call me Koda. It is so nice to meet you. Your grandfather and I have been friends for many moons." Koda said while still shaking Muskegon's hand. Muskegon pulled his hand back slowly. "Likewise, Koda! If I am being honest, I came across the Arbour just to meet you." Muskegon replied. "What? To meet little old, me?" Koda chuckled. "Yes! I was so fascinated with your regalia. I knew I had to come and meet you and learn what it all means! I mean if that is okay. I do have some tobacco on me." Muskegon said while reaching into his pocket. Muskegon handed the tobacco tie to Koda. Koda turned towards Grandpa. "You have raised a fine young man here. Of course, I can tell you a little about my regalia! I have a few moments before my dance category begins. Let us go find a spot.” Koda replied. Muskegon followed Koda and Grandpa to a set of stands.

Muskegon sat down in between Grandpa and Koda. He was wondering how Koda was going to sit down in his regalia, but he sat down with ease. “Thank you, Muskegon, for offering me tobacco first. That shows a high level of respect. So, I dance Men’s Traditional. I have been dancing since I was a young boy such as yourself. Men’s Traditional Dance is sometimes known as the Storytelling Dance. Men’s traditional honours our warriors. The dances tell the stories of warriors hunts or battles. Songs that are played during this dance are typically slower compared to other Men’s dances. The slower pace honours the way that warriors protect their people.” Koda talked with such wisdom. Muskegon was very grateful for the story Koda was telling him. “How do Men’s Traditional Dancers dance? I was talking to my new friend Margaret, and she told me how Jingle Dress Dancers never move backwards.” Koda smiled at Muskegon. “Well, when dancing, Men’s Traditional Dancers will look and step forward and back. Both movements are done as they both are significant. They look forward in honour of the people they have met on their journeys. As well to remember our ancestors who have paved the path. Dancers look backwards to see if the young people are watching and following. The dance that is done is gentle. To leave a gentle impression on Mother Earth, and to leave good tracks.” “Tracks?!” Muskegon exclaimed. “Tracks like a moose?” Koda let out a huge laugh. “I mean tracks in both the physical sense and spiritual sense. While watching the footwork of a dancer, imagine the mark he is leaving. The tracks are there in spirit for other young people to follow. You are also not far off young Muskegon. The tracks also represent the animals, the Land, and all those who thrive upon it.” Koda finished his story just as the Emcee called for all Men’s Traditional Dancers to come onto the Arbour. “Well! I guess I better jet off. Have a fun time watching all the dancers, Muskegon.” Koda got up from the stands and left to go dance. Muskegon and Grandpa walked back to their seats on the other side of the Arbour to finish watching the rest of the dances.

Muskegon and the Drum

By: Marika Schalla

The Pow Wow was slowly coming to a close. Muskegon had so much at his first Pow Wow. There was still one thing left that he wanted to learn about. Drumming. Muskegon walked down to the floor. There were some drummers left who were chatting and laughing. Muskegon decided he needed to be brave and offer his tobacco if he wanted to learn more. He took a deep breath, puffed out his chest like a prairie chicken, and moved forward. “Um. Hello? My name is Muskegon. That is a beautiful drum you have there.” Muskegon said sheepishly. “Oh, hello little one! My name is Junior. Oh, this old thing?” Junior said while touching the drum. “This drum has been in my family for generations. Want to listen?” Muskegon quickly shook his head. He could not believe he was going to hear a drummer so up close! Junior started to play a song. Muskegon counted the beats. 1... 2... 3... 4... Then Junior began singing. Muskegon stood beside Junior as he sang and drummed. He could feel the drum beats deep within his soul. It felt as if it were a heartbeat. When Junior was finished, Muskegon started to softly clap. “Wow! That was amazing Junior thank you. I, erm, have some tobacco here for you? I was wondering if you could tell me more about the drum? I feel like I have so many questions!” Muskegon exclaimed. “Like what job do the drummers have at Pow Wows? What kind of songs are sung? Why do you use drums? Were guitars too expensive?” Muskegon questioned. Junior laughed. “Oh, wow you are full of questions! I will gladly take the tobacco little one.” Muskegon handed Junior the tobacco tie. “You are quite funny. Guitars. Ha ha. I don’t know much about the history of guitars, but I do know why our people use drums. Drums represent the heartbeat of Mother Earth. This instrument is a symbol of our connection to the Land. The songs that are sung and played at Pow Wows vary depending on which event we are drumming for. Drumming is used to send our prayers and good thoughts up to Creator. Especially when Dancers are dancing. Drummers have the responsibility of singing the songs for the dancers.” Junior stopped to take a drink of water.

Muskegon waited in anticipation. He thought to himself “Wow! I was literally just thinking that the drum sounded like a heartbeat.” Muskegon felt a strong connection to the drum. Junior wiped his chin and asked “Have you seen many drums before?” Muskegon replied “One of my uncles has a hand drum. He taught me the different parts before. There is the wooden frame that he called a hoop. Then there is rawhide that is stretched over to make the head of the drum. Oh! And at the back there is sinew to hold the rawhide in place.” “Well look at you, you really know your stuff about drums!” Junior exclaimed. Muskegon looked to the ground. He said to Junior “You know, I was talking with my Grandpa this morning about wanting to touch a drumstick. I know its a sacred item and I should not touch it without asking first. Would I be able to hold your drumstick? It is okay if you say no, I understand!” said Muskegon. Junior looked at Muskegon and replied. “Here you go little one. Why don’t you try to hit the drum? See what it feels like.” Muskegon felt like he was soaring in the clouds. He took the drumstick and held it in both hands. The wood felt smooth under his finger tips. With one swoop he hit the drum right in the middle. The strong beat filled the air. “Now try hitting the drum on beat. 1, 2, 3 ,4.” guided Junior. Muskegon tried and started playing the drum. He felt something special inside. As if his spirit was smiling. “You know, little one, I think you may have what it takes to be a drummer one day.” said Junior. “Do you really think so? Thank you so much, Junior, for letting me try!” replied Muskegon. Just as he was handing the drumstick back to Junior, he heard Grandpa call his name. “Muskegon! It is time to go!” Muskegon raced to Grandpa. “Grandpa, Grandpa! I got to touch a drumstick.” said Muskegon with glee. “Oh, that is great to hear my boy. I am so glad you had a great day. Now it is time to go. We have a big day tomorrow we will be travelling to our next Pow Wow”. Muskegon walked alongside Grandpa to the van. He could not wait for the next Pow Wow.
